Little Spirit Lake to the west, and as you come out to the beach of Spirit Lake you will have passed the camping ground of the old Quaker, well known to the visitors of an early day to these lakes. At Crandall's Hurter's Lodge you will strike a good dinner, and can go home by the east side of the lake or as you came.

A trip around the head of West Okoboji lake, and thence south by the Van Steenburg farm and by Egralharve, where the famous mineral spring is, and where Badgerow, Stevens, Parker and Rider have their beautiful summer homes. thence to Manhattan Beach. Here you can lunch and rest, or after a Manhattan bath you can continue down to Willow Spring farm and get an extra good dinner at Mrs. Harker's, thence around foot of lake—or steam across to the Inn from here—take a run by Ft. Dodge Point, and bordering Smith's bay, to Okoboji bridge. One continuous line of cottages and occupied by as happy a lot of people as one could wish to see. Among these will be found Dr. Cravens, "Lord of the Manor" and "Chief of Water Supply," Mr. McCortney, of the Kirkwood at Des Moines, the Ward brothers, Judge Conrad, Pattees, the Spaldings and others too numerous to mention.

Or some other day go to the head of West Okoboji, where is the property advertised for sale in this pamphlet, in the heavy timber dismount and rest. For one half mile along this bank you will find yourself nearer to Nature's heart than at any other place on the lakes, left so for the enjoyment of those who shall later occupy these lots. So far as possible the "Birds and Squirrels" are protected and trees and grape vines preserved. Continuing south along the beach you come to Pike Point, with Walton bay to the north and Crescent beach to the south, and adjoining is the property of the Patterson-Brown Company, with their beautiful cottages and pavillion; further along the cottages of Messrs. Miller, Chandler and others on Hayward's bay. Farther along you will come upon Camp Leon, where Dr. Layton will entertain you, with fish stories possibly. Further south, Omaha beach—with the Clarks, Slaughters, Criders and others—and still further along will you come to the home of Col. Charles A. Clark, of Cedar Rapids. Below this are other cottages till you reach the Inn.

TO THE READER.

That you may know where you are at, and what interest attaches to such location; that you may be correctly guided to such other places as may interest you, is the sole aim and purpose of this leaflet. The points of history are thought to be correct; the map is correct, with the exception of some bits of road which may have been opened since this was made, and the further changes in the erection of the Inn at Dixon's Beach, and the almost numberless cottages that have been erected along these shores, the erection of the Milwaukee's new depot at Arnolds, and the large additions by the Knight Templars to their buildings at their park on Spirit Lake. We had hoped to be able to announce the station of another railroad on West Okoboji, but—let us stop with a "but." Should you get lost as a result of following this map and directions—come to town and we will help you find yourself.—E. L. BROWNELL.

It is quite certain that Hennepin, while a prisoner of the Indians was in the vicinity of these lakes. Later on, when the Lewis and Clarke expedition was at or near the mouth of the Little Sioux river, an Indian told them that the stream had its origin in a number of lakes to the north. To a certain extent this was true, but the main stream comes from north of the Minnesota state line. It may be said in passing that these lakes outlet through the Gar lakes and a channel joining the Little Sioux some four or five miles to the south and west of West Okoboji. Next in the history of this section, so far as I have been able to ascertain—in the report of Nicollet, the younger, who was commissioned by the War Department to visit these lakes—his order specifically mentioning "Mnne Waukon," or Spirit Lake—he was to report, and so did, on the latitude and longitude as well as elevation of this section. His observations were taken at the head of Spirit Lake.

In the summer of 1856 the first real settlement of the Lake Reigon was attempted, the Gardner and Luce families, the first to locate, building a log cabin near where the massacre monument now stands. As a matter of fact the old cabin, now enclosed for protection, stands where it was erected, with all the hopes and ambitions of the pioneer near a half century ago, and stands with as interesting local history as possibly any similar object in the state or nation. A full account of the massacre and treatment of captives is well stated by Mrs. Abbie Gardner-Sharpe, the sole survivor of that horrible affair, in her book, "The Spirit Lake Massacre," for sale by the author at her cottage near the monument, and at Brownell's Pharmacy, Spirit Lake. From 1857 on, the settlement of this region has been continuous. The only real set-back the county has received, and which, for a time, seriously threatened the future of the county, was during the years 1866 to '68, when the skies were darkened and the grasshopper was a burden. About twenty years since, the Lake Region become celebrated or known as a resort for hunting and fishing, and let it be known that but one fish story has ever been told of these lakes, that could not be believed.*

The city of Spirit Lake, with a population of 1500, is as attractive a little city as can be found in the state. Stores well supplied with finely assorted stocks of goods, in the various lines. Our public buildings will compare favorably with any like county-seat; and as for Churches, we have Baptist, Catholic, Episcopal and Lutheran, having frequent if not regular services. The Methodist church, with Rev. Dr. Lyman, and the Presbyterian, with Rev. Dr. Rayson, as pastors, have services each Sunday; to all of these strangers are cordially welcomed.

three roads leading to Okoboji. The east road will give you a beautiful view to the east and south on East Okoboji lake; or by the west road through the timber, as pretty a way as lovers (of nature) need ask for. As you cross the swing bridge, after a cooling drink at Wilson & Sons, notice to your left the point of timber where the railroad leaves the bridge—here stood the cabin of the Granger brothers and where one of them was killed; farther to the north is Okoboji station. Continuing across the bridge and causeway you cross the railway track and come to a little grocery store; near here stood the cabin of the Mattock family, and here some ten or eleven persons, adults and children, were killed the day of the massacre, March 8, 1857. Driving on to the south you will, when well into the woods, pass the Little Church and the home of its pastor, Mrs. Hornaday, and still farther you will pass the Okoboji cemetery. A most beautiful "God's Acre," appropriately guarded by the timber at either side, with sentinel trees throughout this pretty enclosure with its gentle slope to lake Minnewashta. Down the hill and to the west and you soon come to the monument, erected to the memory of those massacred not only, but historically recounting the names and deeds of the rescuing party which was sent. Of this expedition the Hon. R. A. Smith, living at Okoboji, was a member. At this place Gardner and wife, Mrs. Luce and children were killed. And here lives the survivor of not only the horrors of that day and night, but of several months. She will make your visit interesting, and the relics and curios in the old cabin are well worth viewing.

You can, after viewing Pillsbury's point and the many pretty cottages near by, return to Arnolds Park for a dinner, passing in the woods the cottage of Chief Justice Given and others. If you so desire you can go to the east, crossing the outlet, on the east side of the woods. Here Messrs. Clark and Luce were killed. On or near here Mr. Howe was killed the second day.

most beautiful view meets the eye, turn which way you will. North from Warner's Chapel and at the edge of the timber you see the home of Peter Ladue. Near here, the point marked by a circle, was the cabin of Mr. Howe, where seven persons were killed. Follow the road skirting the timber to the second point indicated, just across a deep ravine from the home of Mr. Arthur, on the way-side of the road, here stood the log houses of Messrs. Noble and Thatcher and here two men and two children were killed and two women were captured. These were the last killed and closed the second day of the massacre.

To get home your road will bear to the north and northwest. You go down a steep hill and at the right, east of you, when upon the bridge, you will see in the south bank a fine mineral spring, not easily reached, but well worth a visit. You will find your way to town near the bank of the East Okoboji and across the causeway into the city.

Some other day take your wheel, or wheels, and passing west along the south border of Spirit Lake, by the West Side Hotel turning to the north, you will first pass the home of B. F. Stevens, of St. Louis. Keeping still to the north you will pass Templars' Park on your right, with its fine array of buildings, certainly beautiful for situation. Further along you will find cottages and the summer home of J. S. Polk, of Des Moines, and you are at Marble Grove, where Marble was killed on the 13th of March by the same band of Indians as had done the bloody work at Okoboji. A circle on the map near Marble Lake indicates the place.

Further along, through a most beautiful tract of timber land, you will pass the strange "Sunken" Lake on your left and when you have crossed a bridge over an inlet you are brought within the circle of mounds, left by that unknown race of an unknown period. These were partially opened some years since and skeletons of large size discovered. Further exploration should be had of these remains of pre-historic fortifications. Farther along you will see
